In his latest article entitled: "Securitizing the Arctic indigenous peoples: A community security perspective with special reference to the Sámi of the European high north", Dr. Kamrul Hossain has examined the securitizing move by the Arctic indigenous peoples, in particular the Sámi of the European high north, to embrace non-traditional aspects of security, such as human and societal security. Whereas these aspects of security do play an important role in framing the larger security framework, he concludes that non-traditional aspects of security remain subject to scrutiny by states and exist in a vertical structure. The Sámi, therefore, rely on affirmative actions by states to enjoy greater rights to maintain their community security.
